LINK TO STRATEGIC FRAMEWORK: STUDENT, PARENT, AND COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT

The Hampton House was a popular motel and social hub for African-Americans during the 1950s and 1960s. Wedding receptions and beauty contests enlivened the motel's pool deck. During the evening locals and out-of-towners packed the club, enjoying great music and good company.

During segregation, outstanding performers and black celebrities were able to perform at popular clubs and hotels on Miami Beach but were not allowed reside there. The Hampton House provided those entertainers and stars with a superb place to stay. The Hampton House accommodated individuals, such as, Dr. Martin Luther King who had a special room where he first practiced his famous "I Have a Dream" speech and Muhammad Ali who held his victory party at the Hampton House when he beat Sonny Liston. Eventually, the Hampton House served as a bridge into integration, during the period of segregation. During this time individuals like Harvey Ruvin, County Clerk and editor of the Miami News, Howard Kleinberg, would be seen at the Hampton House enjoying the best jazz in town.

The integration of South Florida in the 1970's drastically impacted the Hampton House Motel. The once "Jewel of the South" became a derelict building. Nevertheless, in 2001, a group of individuals came together and decided to preserve the historical richness of the building and sought to achieve historic designation. Initial founders of the Hampton House Project secured assistance from the African America Committee of Dade Heritage Trust, Inc., and together embarked on an ambitious effort to save the building from demolition, secure County support to purchase the property, and secure General Obligation Bond dollars build the Hampton House museum, as well as form he Hampton House Trust, Inc., a 501(c) 3 organization.
