LINK TO STRATEGIC BLUEPRINT: INFORMED, ENGAGED AND EMPOWERED STAKEHOLDERS

Learning disabilities are neurologically-based processing problems. These processing problems can interfere with learning basic skills such as reading, writing and/or math. They can also interfere with higher level skills such as organization, time planning, abstract reasoning, long or short term memory and attention. It is important to realize that learning disabilities can affect an individual's life beyond academics and can impact relationships in the workplace, and with family and friends. A learning disability cannot be cured or fixed; it is a lifelong challenge. However, with appropriate support and intervention, people with learning disabilities can achieve success in school, at work, in relationships, and in the community.

Diandre Incera, is a visually impaired 7th grader at Fienberg-Fisher K-8 Center whose famous life motto is "I'll give it a try." He has never let his disability impede his participation in any school or life activities. Diandre chooses to concentrate on his enhanced senses, rather than focus on his inability to see. He can recognize people by their footsteps, and has a gift for music. Diandre is known by teachers, staff and peers to be adaptable to any situation, and puts forth effort to participate in all activities. Diandre is always open to suggestions, and is known around campus for his incredible kindness. You might see him learning how to navigate the streets of South Beach with his orientation and mobility teacher, as independence is a life goal. Diandre participates in Special Olympics, playing basketball, soccer and bowling. Diandre took on the challenge of an overnight camping fieldtrip in the Everglades, even Slough Slogging. The next time anyone is faced with a challenge, a recommended strategy is thinking of Diandre and saying "I'll give it a try!"

October was originally designated in the United States as Learning Disabilities Month in 1985 through a proclamation by President Ronald Reagan. Learning Disabilities Awareness Month is an annual campaign that takes place each October where people pay special attention to children and adults with learning disabilities.

Children with disabilities such as Diandre face challenges interpreting what they see and hear, and linking information from different parts of the brain. It is important during Learning Disabilities (LD) Month to focus less on the disabilities aspect and focus more on the incredible abilities many of these individuals possess as well as emphasize the phenomenal achievements and important strides many of these individuals have made. Learning Disabilities (LD) affects millions of children and adults in school and in everyday life.

Approximately 58 million people in the United States have a disability. People with disabilities are people first, who happen to have a disability. Equal treatment is essential to the well-being and acceptance of our coworkers with a disability. Education is the key to helping people understand each other.

The Office of Exceptional Student Education serves children and families throughout the district by developing, coordinating and overseeing programs that support students with disabilities in order to ensure that curriculum, instructional and behavioral practices are tailored to meet their educational needs. The Office is also committed to enhancing academic success for all students by providing access to age appropriate school and community resources that will benefit the individual needs of each student. Specific programs and services include early identification and intervention, psycho-educational evaluation and placement, transition support and truancy prevention.
