During her tenure, the Congresswoman served as the chairwoman of the Education Appropriations Subcommittee from 1983 to 1993. As chairwoman, she played an integral role in passing legislation that helped improve schools. After being elected to United States Congress at 66 years old, Congresswoman Meek launched an ambitious agenda that focused on the needs of her district that included issues arising from unemployment, immigration, poverty, and natural disasters.

Throughout her six terms as a member of Congress, Congresswoman Meek became a champion for the least and the lost. The Congresswoman served as a voice for those who were underrepresented and underserved by championing legislation that created jobs and provided opportunities for African Americans to have their own businesses. Additionally, Congresswoman Meek helped modify social security to cover household workers, fought for equal residency rights for Haitian Immigrants, expanded Head Start to include Early Head Start, as well as expanded the Economic Opportunity Act programs.
