LEGAL PRINCIPLES

A. The "One-Person, One-Vote" Standard

Redistricting is the process of redrawing the lines of districts from which public officials are elected.[1] Redistricting takes place following each census, and typically affects all jurisdictions that use districts and have representative bodies, like members of Congress, state legislatures, county and city commissions and school boards. The United States Constitution requires the reapportionment of Congressional Districts following every decennial census.[2] Most states' constitutions and local government charters similarly require their district lines to be re-drawn following the census.[3] Prior to 1960, however, the redistricting process was largely considered a "political" affair, best left to the judgment and discretion of legislative bodies and government officials. During this period, the courts generally did not get involved in state and local redistricting disputes, and court challenges were viewed as non-justiciable and summarily rejected.[4]

From 1900 through 1960—as populations in Southern States migrated from rural to urban areas—many state legislatures failed to redraw their districts to reflect the enormous population shifts toward the cities. For example, by 1960, about 14% of the population in Tennessee could elect a majority of the state legislature. In statewide contests in Georgia, a vote in 45 sparsely populated rural counties had 20 times the weight of a vote in urban Fulton County.[5] As a result, many rural districts had a distinct advantage, and disproportionate control of the legislative bodies.

As the 1960s approached, more-and-more cases were brought by urban voters to challenge these political decisions. Many of these challenges relied largely on the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The first significant challenge is the landmark case Baker v. Carr.[6] This case was brought by Shelby County Court Chairman Charles Baker, an urban voter, challenging districts drawn for the Tennessee General Assembly. Like many states of this era, Tennessee districts of the early 1960s were designated by straight, geometrical lines that formed square, regularly shaped districts—with some predominantly rural and some urban.

6 369 U.S. 186, 234 (1962).

Baker argued that Tennessee's rural districts were unfairly more influential than the more densely populated urban districts. Although the Supreme Court did not rule on the merits of Baker's case, for the first time it recognized that redistricting was not just a political issue, but a justiciable one, and that it would be subject to Equal Protection scrutiny. From this case, the principal of "one-person, one-vote" has evolved.[7]

One-person, one-vote means that representative districts should be roughly the same size in population so that in the selection of each representative, each voter's vote will count roughly on equal in terms. Subsequent decisions of the Supreme Court underscored the significance of drawing districts of roughly equal populations by requiring that it be done as nearly as may be "practicable."[8] This means that state and municipal governments must make an "honest, good faith effort" to construct districts of equal population sizes. The ideal population for each district is calculated by dividing the number of districts in a jurisdiction by the total population. The re-drawn districts' population should be roughly equal to the ideal size, and any shifts in population should be accounted for.

This principle was embodied in the Governance Section of the Education Code, wherein it is required that school board member residence areas be designated through a resolution by majority vote of the board and be "equal in population as nearly as practicable." §1001.36 Fla. Stat. (2010).

In applying the one-person, one-vote principal to state and local legislative bodies,[9] the U.S. Supreme Court has considered gross deviations of 10% (+ 5% or- 5% of the ideal district size) to be de minimus.[10] Deviations greater than 10%, however, are acceptable only if they can be justified "based on legitimate considerations incident to the effectuation of a rational state policy."[11] Although the Court has permitted gross deviations of up to 16% of the population, 10% deviation seems to be more acceptable range. Without a showing of a gross deviation greater than 10% or some other bad conduct, a challenge to a redistricting plan will face great difficulty in making out a prima facie case for a violation of the one-person, one-vote principle.

9 The duty to reapportion the United States House of Representatives is imposed by Article I, Section 2 of the United States Constitution. The Courts have interpreted Article I as imposing a much stricter population equality standard in congressional redistricting. Congressional districts must be drawn within a state so that they are as mathematically equal as is reasonably possible. White v. Weiser, 412 U.S. 783, 790 (1973); Karcher v. Daggett, 462 U.S. 725, 730 (1983).

For the implementation of the one-person, one-vote principle, the Supreme Court developed a quantitative constitutional analysis and has set standards for determining equal representation for equal numbers of people.[12]

B. Section 2 of The Voting Rights Act: Results Standard

Redistricting plans must also comply with section 2 of the federal Voting Rights Act.[13] Under this act, districts cannot be drawn in such a manner as to dilute or minimize the voting strength of racial and other minorities.[14]

Minority voter dilution claims under federal voting rights laws typically focus on whether the three Gingles factors are present:

(1) The existence of a minority group that is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in a single-member district;

(2) The minority group is politically cohesive; and

(3) The white majority votes sufficiently as a bloc to enable it usually to defeat the minority's preferred candidate.[15]

In addition, the courts have required plaintiffs to demonstrate the existence of several other historical and socio-economic factors, including eight factors that were outlined in the Senate report which makes up part of the legislative history of the voting rights act.[16] A court must ultimately determine whether in light of the Gingles factors and the totality of the circumstances, the challenged plan dilutes minority voting strength.[17] The Gingles factors apply to single-member, multi-member and at-large redistricting plans.[18] Courts' analyses have often emphasized the importance of achieving "proportionality," which is a term used to link "the number of majority-minority voting districts to minority members share of the relevant population."[19]

C. Other Redistricting Principles

12 See Kirkpatrick v. Preisler, 394 U.S. 526 (1969) (a variance of 5.97 percent between the population of the largest and smallest U. S. Congressional districts in Missouri was too great to meet the "nearly as practicable" standard); While v. Weiser, 412 U.S. 783 (1973) (a variance of 4.13 percent in Texas found unconstitutional); Karcher v. Daggett, 462 U.S. 725 (1983) (absolute population equality is the standard for determining whether a congressional redistricting plan satisfies Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution).

19 Johnson v. DeGrandy, 512 U.S. 997, 1014 n. I I (1994).

In 1986, the Court's attention shifted toward political gerrymandering and the creation of majority-minority districts. A succession of cases after Davis defined a qualitative analysis (i.e., considering compelling governmental interest, legislative intent, the bizarreness of a district's shape, etc), often buttressed by statistical measures, based upon the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment for state legislative redistricting and the equal protection component of the Fifth Amendment Due Process Clause for congressional redistricting.[20]

D. Fourteenth Amendment

Districts cannot rely too heavily on race when redrawing its districts. Recent cases, for example, have defined the limits and depths of the goal that representation of a minority group should roughly equal that of the minority group population.[21] The courts have sought to strike a balance between the rights of minority voters to elect and select representatives of their own choice, and the rights of majority voters and the State to preserve traditional norms of redistricting. The courts, for example, have recognized the Fourteenth Amendment right of white majority voters to challenge a "majority-minority" district, based solely on the existence of its irregular shape.[22]

The courts recognize that in the redistricting process legislative bodies should be aware of racial demographics, but that race should not "predominate" and subordinate traditional redistricting principles without a compelling reason.[23] State and municipal governments may recognize racial factors, provided its action is directed toward some common relevant interest.[24]

This line of Equal Protection cases, however, does not require perfectly symmetrical district shapes, and courts tend to approve a district as long as "it is reasonably compact and regular, taking into account traditional redistricting principles such as maintaining communities of interest and traditional boundaries."[25]

Supp. 1460 (N.D. Fla. l996)(found Florida's Third Congressional District to be an unconstitutional race—based gerrymander which must be redrawn); Miller v. Johnson, 115 S.Ct. 2475 (l995)(plaintiff states a claim under the Equal Protection Clause by showing that a redistricting plan, on its face, has no rational explanation except as an effort to separate voters based on their race); Bush v. 25 Bush v. Vera, 517 U.S. 952, 977 (1996).

With the recent Supreme Court decision in Department of Commerce et al v. United States House of Representatives, et al,[26] affirming that section 195 of the Census Act (13 U.S.C. 195) requires, where feasible, the use of statistical sampling in assembling the myriad demographic data that are collected in connection with the decennial census, but forbidding the use of sampling in calculating population for purposes of apportionment,[27] it is increasingly likely that the question of "one-person, one-vote" will be significant again, along with continuing questions regarding political gerrymandering.

In addition to the current attention on sampling at the federal level, efforts are currently underway in certain state legislatures to prohibit the use of census numbers derived from sampling for redistricting purposes. Republican lawmakers in Arizona, Minnesota, Colorado and Maryland have all introduced Resolutions to that effect. [28]

Since 2001, moreover, technology has added significant levels of detailed geographical, sociological, economic, political, age, racial, ethnic and gender information to the redistricting process. Census tiger files, geographic information systems and personal computers have made it possible to re-draw maps with greater precision, accuracy and efficiency. Political and demographic data may now be displayed at the block level, and compactness and dispersion measures are possible. With the advances, availability and expedience of this new technology, it will be interesting to see if this will effect the courts' requirements that districts be as equal as is "practicable," and whether that will in turn affect the rule that a 10% gross deviation among districts is de minimus.

Just as the Court gravitated toward increasingly precise measurements of population in the earlier line of cases, if sampling is utilized in post-2000 census redistricting, legislative bodies, elections supervisors and other government officials will find it essential to use the most refined techniques available to protect against potential challenges. It is important that municipal and county governments have (and/or retain) a team of advisors, counselors, computer programmers and cartographers assembled to provide expert service in this process, so that in drawing districts they will be

It should be noted that there are differing opinions with respect to the question of what other data must be calculated in employing statistical sampling. Some are of the view that federal funding formulas and redistricting must both be based upon figures utilizing sampling; others maintain the court left the issue of mandatory utilization of sampling for redistricting figures an open question. knowledgeable about the operative legal standards and be highly competent in the utilization and analysis of statistical data.

The following are some traditional redistricting principles that are recognized by the courts and that the School Board may properly consider using during reapportionment.

1. Board member residence areas must be drawn as nearly equal in population as practical.

2. Board member residence areas must consist of contiguous territory.

3. Board member residence areas should have a rational configuration taking into consideration factors such as compactness and major roads.

4. Pursuant to the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Board member residence area boundaries should not unnecessarily divide areas of concentrated minority populations or drastically discriminate against a political party.

5. Current Board member residence area boundaries should be retained where feasible.

6. Board member residence area boundaries should take into consideration communities of interest and keep communities intact.

F. Staggered Elections for the School Board

The governance statute and consent decree also require that the board members' terms shall not be disturbed by the re-designation of residence area boundaries for board members, and generally that such terms be staggered. §§ 1001.36 and 1001.362 Fla. Stat. (2010). Numerous courts have found that permitting a staggered election cycle to continue unaltered following reapportionment caused, at most, a temporary disenfranchisement of voters that violates neither the equal protection clause nor any other constitutional provision. New elections for every board member would be a massive intrusion into a state-mandated political process of staggered elections requiring new elections and truncated terms of office.[29]

Due to the complexities of the reapportionment process, a temporary loss of voting rights (the cases speak of a "delay" in the right to vote) is tolerated when it is an "absolute necessity" or when it is "unavoidable".[30] A temporary delay in voting, within a staggered-term structure, is an "absolute necessity" and is "unavoidable" when it is caused by the enactment of a new plan that is passed to correct a constitutionally-defective districting system. For this reason, partial temporary disenfranchisement is tolerated when the School Board approved a new districting plan. Moreover, the deprivation suffered is de minimis at most and the remedy would not justify the massive intrusion into the state's political machinery. The disenfranchisement is temporary in nature and is no different from that experienced by "new registrants who reach the age of 18 years shortly after an election and (by) people moving from one area to another."[31]

For example, the first election following the School Board's last redistricting effort in 2002, only School Board Districts 2, 4, 6 and 8 were up for election, while Districts 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 were not. The District 5 School Board seat was also filled that year by an appointment made by Governor Bush. Therefore, it is anticipated that under the current statute and consent decree, only School Board Districts 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 would be up for election in 2012.

The School Board may consider other redistricting principles as well. Our office will bring an item shortly to determine what needs to be done and we plan to bring an item to suggest a redistricting consultant. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

2010 Census Data

Miami-Dade School Board Districts

Prepared for the Miami-Dade County School Board

by Miami-Dade Department of Planning and Zoning, Research Section
May 2011

Introduction

On March 17, 2011 the U.S. Census Bureau released the 2010 Census data for the state of Florida and local areas. The following provides a look on population, race and ethnicity, and age groups by school board district in Miami-Dade County.

Population

Based on Census 2010 figures, the population in Miami-Dade continued to increase during the past decade from 2,253,362 in 2000 to 2,496,435 in 2010, up by 10.8 percent. This growth trend was also seen in all school board districts, except for District 2, where it dropped by less than half a percentage point (see Figures 1 and 2, Table 1 and Map 1). The largest increase in population was seen in District 9, from 252,594 persons in 2000 to 320,484 persons in 2010.

Eight of nine Miami-Dade school board districts saw an overall increase in population between 2000 and 2010.

There was a double-digit population growth in four school board districts with District 9 leading the list at 26.9 percent, District 7 following at 21.3 percent, and District 3 third at 16.3 percent. These changes in district population place individual school board districts in a different position than in 2000. In particular, Figure 3 shows that in 2010, unlike in 2000, over half of the districts are significantly below the equal apportionment level based on census data.

Race and Ethnicity

Hispanics

During the period from 2000 to 2010 the Hispanic population grew rapidly resulting in Hispanics today accounting for 65 percent of the County population. This is reflected at the school board district level, where Hispanic persons increased at a rate varying from 10 to 76 percent (see Table 2 and Figure 4). In 2010, the largest number of Hispanics was in District 4 at 255,491. District 5 and District 7 followed, at near equal levels, with 240,493 and 237,555 persons of Hispanic or Latino origin, respectively. While the fewest Hispanics lived in District 1 and District 2, in 2010 their number grew above 75,000 in each of these districts. In relative terms, the most important increase of Hispanics during 2000 – 2010 was in District 9, by 76 percent. District 7 is second, with an impressive 44 percent growth of Hispanic population since 2000.

Over the past ten years the number of Hispanics increased in all districts, while Not Hispanic Whites decreased in all but one district. At the same time, the picture for Not Hispanic Blacks was mixed.

Non Hispanic Whites

Over the past decade the Not Hispanic White population declined. In 2000 there were 465,772 persons, while by 2010 this figure declined to 383,551, a loss of 82,221 persons. This represents a 17.7 percent decline over the past ten years. As a result, the Not Hispanic White population was reduced to 15.4 percent of the total population. This is seen at the school board district level, where District 3 registered an increase in Not Hispanic Whites by only 0.2 percent. This district has the largest number of not Hispanic White persons at 116,724 in 2010. Five districts 1, 4, 7, 8, and 9, showed a decline of over 25 percent. Not Hispanic Whites in District 7 declined by 17,856, the largest numerical decrease.

Not Hispanic Blacks

During the period from 2000 to 2010 the Not Hispanic Black population showed a modest decrease of 0.3 percent, resulting in Not Hispanic Blacks accounting for 17.1 percent of the County population. At the individual school board level, four districts showed an increase in Not Hispanic Black persons. This varied from 3.2 percent in District 1 to 26.9 percent in District 3. On the other hand, five districts displayed decreases of Not Hispanic Blacks, with Districts 2, 4, and 6 declining by 10 percent or more. In District 2 there was a 10 percent decline in Not Hispanic Black persons, in numerical terms this amounted to a loss of 14,803, the largest of all districts.

Changes in District Shares

While the Hispanic share in the total County population jumped from 57.3 percent in 2000 to 65 percent in 2010, the shares for Not Hispanic White and Not Hispanic Black declined to 15.4 and 17.1 percent respectively. The remaining 2.5 percent are Not Hispanic Others (see Tables 3 to 6). In terms of the number of persons, Not Hispanic Whites actually declined in by 82,221 since 2000, and Not Hispanic Blacks decreased by 1,490.

Figure 7 illustrates the increase in proportion of Hispanics in the total population of each school board district between 2000 and 2010. The largest gain was in District 9, from 38.4 percent Hispanics in 2000 to 53.2 percent in 2010, or an increase by 15 percentage points. While it grew the least during the period 2000 – 2010, the proportion of Hispanics in District 5 remained at 88.1 percent, the third highest of all school board districts.

The proportion of Not Hispanic Whites dropped across the board between 2000 and 2010. The most significant decrease was in District 9, from 31.9 percent in 2000 to 21.0 percent in 2010, or down by 11 percentage points. District 7 experienced a comparable decrease in proportion of Non Hispanic White population, down by 10 percentage points from 2000 to 2010.

Unlike the changes in Hispanic or Non Hispanic White population that were sometimes large and always in the same direction for all districts, the changes in proportion of Non Hispanic Blacks tended to be much less pronounced and varied from one school board district to another. Districts 1, 3, 5, and 9 displayed increases varying from 3.2 percent in District 1 to 26.9 percent in District 3. The other five districts showed decreases of up to 18.1 percent as was the case for District 4. Despite the fact that the proportion of Non Hispanic Blacks in District 2 decreased by 5.9 percent, the largest decrease for all districts, Non Hispanic Blacks still remained a majority at 55.1 percent in 2010. The second most significant loss, in relative terms, of Black Non Hispanic population was in District 9, where the decrease was 3.4 percent. The share of Black Non Hispanics decreased by less than one percentage point in Districts 4, 5, 6 and 8 ,while in Districts 1 and 3 it actually increased.

Persons Under 18 Years Old

The Census 2010 data revealed a very important piece of information that appears to shed some light on the trends in school enrollment. Over the past decade the populations of persons under 18 in the County declined by 13,385 persons or 2.4 percent (see Table 7). Figure 8 shows these changes at the school board district level. Five of the nine school board districts experienced decreases, with three showing losses of at least 10 percent. District 2 had the largest loss of persons under 18, at 19.3 percent. Four districts displayed increases in the population under 18. Districts 3 and 9 had the largest increases at 15 percent and 14 percent, respectively (see Map 2).
